Useful Links

Part 1: UPR Info
UPR Info's website includes information, guidebooks and all the documents related to the UPR.
UPR Info's country pages (select: "UPR by Country" on our Homepage) include the previous "Other Stakeholders' Report" as well as all the reports submitted to the OHCHR.

You may find UPR recommendations on UPR Info's database.

If you have issues in viewing the video during the online session, you may watch on youtube.

To read "The Civil Society Compendium: A comprehensive guide for CSOs engaging in the UPR", click here.
For the French version, click here.
For the Spanish version, click here.

Please keep in touch:
Twitter, Facebook and Instagram: @UPRinfo
Email: stakeholders@upr-info.org

Part 2: Human Rights Measurement Initiative, how to use HRMI data in submissions for the UPR

You can find HRMI's data on the Rights Tracker and more information on our general HRMI website, including:

- A summary of our research credentials
- The list of countries in our survey in 2021
- The list of most of our country ambassadors (some are not listed publicly for security reasons) – please contact yours if you would like to join the survey
- Our security policy and advice for human rights defenders on their own data security
- A collection of country spotlights, using our data in talking about human rights in different places.
- The table comparing our indicators to the SDG indicators is here.

For any enquiries, please email Thalia Kehoe Rowden: thalia.kehoerowden@motu.org.nz
We have made two short, animated videos explaining how and why we measure human rights:

- Economic and social rights
- Civil and political rights

You can also watch a short demo video on using the Rights Tracker, to refresh your memory, or share with a colleague. There's a range of other useful videos on our YouTube channel.
Please keep in touch:

Twitter and Facebook: @rightsmetrics   Newsletter sign-up: https://humanrightsmeasurement.org/blog/email-newsletter/